

RANCHER'S REMORSE

Faith Quinlan agreed to marry Cooper Culpepper as part of the deal she and her sisters signed to help the Culpepper boys fulfill the terms of their Granddaddy's will so they could keep the family ranch. But what Cooper doesn't know might hurt him. Faith is more than willing to help Cooper out—as he discovers, to his delight, on their wedding night—the trouble is, she thinks she's not able. But Faith has...

Reader's Opinions

This novel was written by a crazy person, that's the only way I could describe what I just read. I have no issues really with the novel, other than the two people staring in the novel are crazy. Absolutely crazy. When the hero came up with the idea she was selling babies, I just about lost it. What a long jump that was!
